Announcing An Online Workshop

Exploring, Clarifying & Living our Values in
The Current Times

11, 12, 18, 19 April 2026

3:00 pm to 7:00 pm

Programme Faculty: Dr. Uma Jain

www.isabs.org

Clarifying our values and truly living them is a critical work for a meaningful and satisfying life, personally and professionally. It is not uncommon for people to feel empty in the midst of an apparently successful life due to lack of clarity about what they truly value.

The complexity, rapid changes and uncertainty in the current world make it essential that we identify what is most important to us and direct our energies towards it sooner than later.

Building a desired culture around chosen values is one of the core responsibilities of leaders for organization development. Organizations often face gaps between desired, espoused and practiced values.

This programme lays the foundation for a more meaningful and values-oriented life and supports leaders responsible for building a desired culture in their organizations.

Agenda

- Clarifying values — stated, desired and practiced
- Awareness and examination of congruence between stated and practiced values
- Developing a clearer and stronger sense of values for leadership roles
- Models for developing competence in values practice
- Planning for action and further learning

Methodology

The workshop will be based on experiential designs and models developed through decades of work with individuals and organizations on values and culture building.

A mix of experiential activities, group discussions and conceptual inputs will be used in a highly participative learning environment.

Post Workshop Session:

Approximately one month after the programme, we will hold an online session with the participants to share insights, reflect on experiences, and explore any dilemmas in applying the learnings.
